

Hugh & Eva Buhrich

Architects HUGH & EVA BUHRICH came to Australia as refugees from Nazi Germany. They settled in Castlecrag, where Hugh established a small private practice by referring to himself as a planning consultant and a designer. Hugh established a wide range of clients and eventually gained registration as an architect in the 1970s. Buhrich was a rational modernist. He was inventive and a precision craftsman, clothing functionalism in clean lines and occasional strong colour.

Buhrich house, Castlecrag
SLM

Buhrich house feature
Pinterest

Eva initially worked in architectural design until the poor pay rates for women architects resulted in her moving to writing and editing as a career. She became a well-known commentator on architecture and design, writing for magazines, industry journals and the Sydney Morning Herald.

Willoughby Incinerator
(the silver sculpture is a recent addition)
GML